THE IMPORTANCE OF PNG

Because of the geographical proximity to Australia and Papua New Guinea, the two countries share a special relationship. The links are wide-ranging and include agreements on political, investment, consular, security and trade relationships.

Since independence in 1975, there have been some remarkable achievements in the growth and diversity of Papua New Guinea's economy.

Apart from companies investing in major mining, oil and gas projects, there are opportunities for investment, especially in joint ventures with Papua New Guinea businesses in areas such as tourism, timber processing, the processing of marine products, in agricultural extension, health, education and value-added processing.

Queensland is the closest Australian State to Papua New Guinea, and with this natural advantage further enhanced by the direct transport links between them, Queensland companies are well placed to pursue the opportunities available and to contribute to the future of the commercial relationship between Papua New Guinea and Queensland.

THE ASSOCIATION

The Papua New Guinea – Queensland Business Association Inc. was established in November 1990 primarily to help further Papua New Guinea and Queensland's mutual interests in each other's markets in terms of trade and investment. The Association is able to provide assistance to Queensland firms endeavouring to develop export markets and expand existing trade with Papua New Guinea.

The Papua New Guinea – Queensland Business Association became an incorporated body in December 1992 to conduct itself as a single business entity. It was recognised and supported by the Government of Papua New Guinea, through the Office of the Consulate in Queensland, and the State of Queensland.

A small group consisting mainly of people who have lived and served in Papua New Guinea formed the Australia-Papua New Guinea Society Inc. in 1985.

In August 1998, the APNG Society merged with the Papua New Guinea – Queensland Business Association to form the Australia - Papua New Guinea Business and Cultural Society (Inc).

In July 2003, the members voted to shorten the Society's name to that of the Australia Papua New Guinea Association (Inc).
